Heard.

In this case, a girl who is still in her tender age has got a leg amputed due to the accident. At this tender age, if a girl looses a leg, then all that what could be an asset in her prime youth has been robbed off and future has been jeopardised . It takes away the best of the charm which she could generate out of her life. There cannot be any compensation for the loss of those feelings which a girl would inculcate when she feels the loss of a leg which would deprive her of her natural gait. The amount awarded is not considered to be exaggerated in any manner. That is only a token of compensation for what could be her prime asset in her life. There is no force in the appeal. The appeal is hereby dismissed.
